CANTERBURY MUSIC HALL
OR FALACE OF GLASS,
Where shall I go to night;—where make my evening calls—
A thousand voices seem to say, "To Canterbury Hall."
The murrou'd Falace of the gay Broadway,
Where every pleasure in a beight array
Where every pleasure in a beight array
Of selectibing talent, creeks the dazgled eve. where shall yolos seem to say, "To Canterbury Hall."
The mirror'd Faice of the gay Broadway,
Where every peasure in a bright array
Of sparkling taleun, greets the dazzled eye,
Driving dull care away, and resiste high
The downing the old, and lights up a flame
Of brightest pleasure in the joyful heart,
To see how perfect each one plays his part.
For every taste some food is here povided;
Perfection all, success, long since decided,
Whether in song, or dance, or feats athletic,
Comie recital, or the mock pathetic;
Each taste will here be well supplied,
In favor "The Canterbury" has ta en a rapid stride
Far in advance of all compers:
Its proprietors have no dread fears
Of comperition from its rival broaders,
For their attractions far outrival others.
No sum too large to pay where talent offers,
And thus they nightly ill their coffers—
Content their patrons 'praise to hear,
And for the rest they've not a single fear.
Here nightly may be seen as triping it so gally.
The "merry Ogden," with his "dear shillelagh,"
Shouts esh through the hall—a smile on overy face is
When he recounts in song famed "Limerick Races,"
Or calls "the boys" up to their chass in spelling.
And listen to the jokes cach night he's telling,
And listen to the jokes cach might he's telling.
And when he recounts in song famed "Limerick Races,"
Or or he with boys "up to their chass in spelling.
And his he hall—a smile on overy face is
When he recounts in song famed "Limerick Races,"
Or calls "the boys" up to their chass in spelling.
And his he to the jokes cach might he's telling,
And his he hall—a shie of the colon.
He had, to make what he sings—
The out the hall, to maker what he sings—
Billy Barlow, Lord Lovell, Cork Leg, or Reuben Wrigh
At Canterbury Hall he sings each night;
And if a "mind diseased" should rare your brain,
Go hear Sam Cowell—you'll soon be right again,
Next comes the gallant Blondin, miracle of daxing,
Stopping at naught for death, nor danger caning;
